BLOOD-STAINED BIT OF PAPER BROUGHT ABOUT A CLASH
Between Attorneys—Trial of Sophie Kritchman and Joe Mitchell.

Waterbury, Conn., March 1.—An attempt on the part of counsel for Joseph Mitchell, who is charged with the murder of Sophie Kritchman, to get in evidence a blood-stained bit of paper on which was written a sentence or two in Lithuanian characters brought about a clash between the attorneys for the two defendants late this afternoon. The matter was temporarily dropped by the judge being marked for identification. It was not put in evidence at this time. This is the first time which it is alleged was found near the place where the wounded Kritchman lay, on Saturday, Sept. 18, by Kutchinsky, brother of Mitchell, which so far as deplorable is said to read:

"Sophie Kritchman shoot me to kill. I die." The remainder of the writing is blurred and not decipherable. The note was exhibited at the trial of Mitchell. Anson O. Sanford was testifying as to his being present when Kutchinsky was found near the body of Mitchell. James M. Lynch of counsel for Mitchell if he had seen a piece of paper near Kutchinsky's body, he would have produced it. Mitchell's counsel, however, introduced the paper and then Mr. Lynch asked Assistant Attorney General for the paper. Mitchell's counsel refused to produce it, but the paper was produced and returned to Mr. Kitchman.
